

Due to my partner's lack of showing up to scheduled work times and both their lack of communication and incorrect communication, all of the work (including the design document from stage 1) except for parts of the "Team Contract" document was done by me. Despite this I believe that the overall project I created is of good quality and effectively does what I set out to do. If I were to continue on this project, I would like to add a webpage to function as a front end for client access. I believe that the executable file is an efficient application for the function and use cases I planned to hit, which is as a program on an employee terminal, or a tool for managers to manage stock and transactions.
